2025 HIGHEST PAID LOCAL GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE REPORT

A report by the Utah Taxpayers Association

OBJECTIVES

For most Utah local governments, their highest expense is salaries for employees. That is expected, as the governments need people to provide services to the taxpayers they serve. This includes city managers, school principals, and park and recreation directors, to name a few. When salaries go up, the governments will need to ask taxpayers for additional money to cover the costs of the pay increases. To that end, we feel it important to take a snapshot of what the highest salaries in local government are at this time.

METHODOLOGY

The Association compiled this data from the Utah State Auditor's transparency website, using FY 2024 reports.

We analyzed the 50 largest cities by population, all 29 counties, and 40 of Utah's 41 school districts (compensation data for Kane County School District could not be verified).

It's important to note that multiple factors, including market studies of comparable public-sector roles, benchmarks against similar private-sector positions, and years of service, influence government salaries.

The figures in this report reflect base salary only and do not include benefits. We've also included the pay of the highest-ranking elected official for each entity.

For context, Utah's median household income is $91,750, and Governor Spencer Cox earns an annual salary of $182,200. In this report, you will find that the governor is not the highest-paid government employee in the state. That doesn't necessarily mean the governor needs a raise.
